

A UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY FOR DOCTORAL STUDENTS

Apply if your research interest aligns with Africa(n)-centred Psychology, Community Psychology, and Africa(n)-centred Masculinity Studies

The UNISA Institute for Social and Health Sciences (ISHS) is an Africa-centred, internationalist home to community-engaged scholars, students and activists who situate themselves in compassionate, transdisciplinary liberatory knowledge practices in the service of human development.

The ISHS is offering potential doctoral students an exciting opportunity to advance their qualifications and further their research skills through UNISA's Grow Your Own Timber (GYOT) Project. GYOT is a strategic UNISA initiative aimed at supporting post-graduate students through fixed-term, full-time contract appointments.

Apply if your research interest is aligned with Africa(n)-centred Psychology, Community Psychology, and Africa(n)-centred Masculinity Studies.

Appointed candidates will be required to register at Unisa in 2020 for doctoral studies, and render research-related services to the ISHS as part of their capacity development.

Remuneration Package: R373 610 per annum

Your application should include the following: letter of motivation; CV; certified copy of your ID; two contactable references; most recent academic transcript; and Concept Note. The Concept Note should be no longer than 4 pages and provide a clear and concise description and framework of the doctoral research that you wish to undertake.

The deadline for applications is 30 September 2019.

Please direct all correspondence and applications to Zoliswa Ntsoko at Zoliswa.Ntsoko@unisa.ac.za.
